The road ahead

WITH Anwar Sadat due to visit Moscow next week, and coming at the end of a tumultuous week of student unrest in Cairo, there was much interest in the words of Defense Minister Moshe Dayan when he addressed the Zionist Congress on Wednesday night. Mr. Dayan was firm and conciliatory, traits which have marked his public statements in recent weeks.

In contrast to the inflammatory speech made by the Egyptian President on Tuesday, Mr. Dayan preferred to dwell on the long-term prospects of the Arab-Israeli conflict and, instead of giving Sadat advice on how to proceed at home, he stressed what he in Israel can do. Wisely Mr. Dayan refrained from making gratuitous remarks about Egypt's present internal troubles, and reflected instead on the meaning of peace.

Mr. Dayan does not see peace as a static term; to him it is a situation which will come at the end of a long process and will be preceded by a long period of what he termed "peace in practice." Mr. Dayan then developed the theme which has absorbed his attention for the past five years: how to achieve maximum power with three million people in this country; how Israel can hold the present cease-fire lines for years, if necessary, and yet maintain normal life in the rear, and how to ensure the survival of Israel in the event of war.

These problems have become almost an obsession with the Minister of Defense, who does not like to belabour the term security, preferring rather to talk about the prospects of the emerging Arab-Jewish coexistence. He noted with much satisfaction the slight changes which have already occurred in the attitude of Arabs to Israel, but warned against drawing an early and unwarranted conclusion that the same process is also happening in the Arab states.

One familiar subject was again treated carefully by Mr. Dayan, that of the Soviet threat. He is not a defender of his views about the possible Soviet role for the time being, the Soviet Union has no interest in embarking on armed hostilities in the Middle East. Speaking to both Europe and the U.S., Mr. Dayan pointed out the grave effect of the growing Soviet presence on Nato and the security of both Europe and the entire Mediterranean basin. In obvious satisfaction with recent American moves to strengthen Israel's defensive capabilities, the Minister of Defense, some days before his own departure for the U.S., paid tribute to President Nixon's efforts both to aid Israel and to prevent war, aims which go together.

This tour d'horizon enabled the delegates of the Zionist Congress to appreciate better the dangers and the prospects facing Israel. Mr. Dayan warned them of the long road ahead, but he also indicated a glimmer of light at the end, which he interpreted as the result of Israel's ability to decide on its own moves. His speech was another indication of the present mood in this country, one of quiet confidence in our ability to handle external threats, with all awareness of the terrible dangers that still lurk around our relatively tranquil borders. Five years after the Six Day War, Mr. Dayan could point with pride to many achievements and to chart the course for the period ahead. This he did with much candour and simplicity.

He was accompanied on the tour, which began Wednesday, by Major-General Mustafa Tlas, Chief of Staff of the armed forces, and other senior Army officers.

As Hadassah objects

Congress rules Zionist leaders must immigrate

Two resolutions, which if carried out, will radically change the face of the Zionist Movement, were passed by the Zionist Congress yesterday amid scenes of prolonged pandemonium. Zionists abroad are now required to "fulfill their Zionism" by coming on aliyah; and they will have to "impart to their children Jewish and Zionist education" — or else resign from any office in the Zionist Movement they may be holding.

All-night voting

True to tradition, the Zionist Congress was making heavy work of electing the Movement's new Executive last night, the closing night of the 28th Congress. What the plenum continued to hear the reports and approve (or not approve) the resolutions of the various committees, the senior lieutenants of the main factions were closeted in a room above the debating hall — horse-trading feverishly over the size and the composition of the new Executive.

By late last night it appeared almost certain that Deputy Knesset Speaker Yitzhak Rabin, of the Labour faction, would receive the appointment of chairman of the Zionist General Council.

If everything works out smoothly and the wall-to-wall coalition is preserved on the Executive, it will have been in no small part due to the behind-the-scenes efforts of Premier Golda Meir. Mrs. Meir was called in earlier this week by Executive Chairman Arye Pinson, when Labour was approaching a deadlock with Mizrachi (N.R.P.). She in turn approached Interior Minister Yosef Burg to use his influence as a counter-weight to Dr. Yitzhak Rabin, who was trying to replace Rabbi Mordechai Kirschbaum with Baruch Delevant as one of Mizrachi's representatives on the Executive. Mr. Pinson had expressed his personal opposition to Durdevant.

Violence broke out in the hall just before midnight. After a series of votes on the activities of WJWS (World Union of Jewish Students), Mizrachi's candidate, Yitzhak Rabin, (Herut) offered a WJWS representative the opportunity to speak. Young Herut and Mizrachi delegates bounded onto the dais, crying: "He will not speak!"

Fist-fights ensued between the young delegates and Congress stewards, who defended the dais by kicking and pushing the assailants off. It proved too dangerous for the WJWS man to speak, so he stepped down.

WJWS has no official delegate to the Congress, because it refused to endorse the Jerusalem Programme — the four fundamental tenets of Zionism as passed at the 1968 Congress. The student organization demands more recognition for the rights of "Palestinians."

Jerusalem Post Reporter

Both resolutions were the initiative of the Labour Zionists' Young Guard — mostly young Israeli Labourites — and both were vociferously opposed by the powerful Hadassah women's bloc (Confederation of General Zionists) at the Congress.

The most unruly scenes occurred, however, in connection with another proposal — by Mizrachi delegates — which called on Congress to laud Israel's fair treatment of its Arab minority and the Arabs in the administered areas. For over an hour, in the afternoon, there was total uproar in the plenum hall, with delegates screaming at each other, and at the session chairman, and three votes taken on the same issue.

The Mizrachi proposal came in the form of a voters' separatism (dissenting proposal) to a resolution of the Committee on Social Problems which praised Israel's society for its maintenance of high morals in times of stress. In the third and final vote, Congress rejected the Mizrachi amendment by 213 votes to 155. In favour were Mizrachi and some of the Labour Zionists; against were Herut, Mizrachi and Confederation of General Zionists.

Peru deports suspect Nazi

LEMA, Peru (Reuters). — Peruvian police yesterday "arrested" Klaus Altmann, a naturalized Bolivian businessman thought to be Nazi criminal Klaus Barbie, to leave the country.

Altmann, who came to Lima last October after 20 years in Bolivia, was reported to go after several threats on his life had been received in the last few days, police said, and he was being driven by two detectives to the Bolivian border.

Altmann has repeatedly denied that he is Barbie, Gestapo chief in the French city of Lyons during the German occupation. Barbie was sentenced to death in his absence by a French court after the war for torturing and killing hundreds of resistance fighters in Lyons.

The Peruvian police spokesman said that Altmann left here by car early yesterday in the company of two Peruvian detectives who will hand him over to Bolivian police at the border town of Desaguadero.

Rogers: U.S. continuing contacts with Israel, Egypt

By SAM LEPSKI
Jerusalem Post Correspondent

WASHINGTON. — Secretary of State William Rogers said yesterday that the U.S. would continue to play an active role in bringing about a Middle East settlement, and declared that Washington was continuing communications with both Egypt and Israel.

Mr. Rogers indicated that the Nixon Administration was not taking at "face value" the reports from Cairo that Egypt had rejected all American diplomatic efforts for close proximity talks. The Secretary was speaking at the annual foreign policy conference for editors and broadcasters at the State Department.

In a review of international developments, Mr. Rogers said the U.S. would continue to strive for a "sensible peace" in the Middle East "fair to all concerned," either through the U.N. or independently through American initiatives.

Much of Mr. Rogers' review of world events and his answers to questions dealt with President Nixon's latest Vietnam peace proposals.

In answer to a question about the effect of violence against organizations promoting U.S.-Soviet cultural exchange, Mr. Rogers said such violence and attacks on Soviet diplomats were "very serious indeed," and denounced them as "reprehensible, counter-productive and harmful."

Jarring pleased

UNITED NATIONS (AP). — U.N. envoy Gunnar Jarring and U.S. Secretary of State William Rogers both were "very pleased" with their Washington talks Wednesday, U.N. and U.S. spokesmen said here yesterday.

The spokesman, however, could not tell reporters whether the two men had come to any agreement on how to proceed towards an Arab-Israeli political settlement.

Dr. Jarring had a long discussion with Secretary Rogers, Joseph Sisco, assistant secretary for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, and Samuel de Palma, assistant secretary for international organization affairs.

Assuming he is then taken on to the Bolivian capital of La Paz, the journey should take at least 35 hours.

The controversy over Altmann's identity was sparked by an un-sourced report in the Paris right-wing newspaper "L'Aurore" last week which claimed he was Barbie.

Police said a two-man anti-Nazi unit had arrived in Peru to check Altmann's real identity and this increased fears for his life, the spokesman added.

The French ambassador to Peru, Albert Chambon, said his government would ask for Altmann's extradition if he was proved to be Barbie. But the Bolivian consul here, Ricardo Rios, said yesterday such a request would be rejected if it were made to Bolivia.

"All Bolivian citizens can always count on the protection of their government," he said.

Yugoslav plane crash said Croat sabotage

BEGRAD (Reuters). — Yugoslav Communists yesterday blamed the crash of an airliner in which 27 persons died, and for a bomb explosion in a train which injured six, on exiled Croatian nationalists (Ustasas) seeking to sabotage a Belgrade Communist Party conference.

The Belgrade conference is debating the complex and still-unresolved problem of nationalist unrest in Yugoslavia's northern Republic of Croatia.

A Yugoslav Airlines DC-9 jet, flying from Stockholm to Belgrade via Copenhagen and Zagreb, crashed Wednesday night in northwest Czechoslovakia, on mountains near the East German frontier. According to the Yugoslav news agency Tanjug, it blew up in the air when Prague flight control lost contact with it.

A stewardess was the only survivor of the 23 passengers and five crew aboard. Sitting in the tail of the plane, which plunged into a pond, she was gravely injured, but was able to talk briefly to doctors during the night.

The 23-year-old woman, Vesna Vulovic, is in critical condition in a Prague hospital with internal injuries and shock.

Experts said she apparently survived because she was in the tail of the plane, which remained intact and landed about 1.5 kilometres from the main wreckage.

Czechoslovak troops and other rescue workers, continuing the grim task of searching the area over which the plane broke up, have recovered 23 bodies so far.

Most of the wreckage and bodies rained down right in the centre of Ceska Kamenice, a quiet Bohemian village of 300, but apparently no body on the ground was injured.

Debris was scattered over a distance of 10 kilometres in hilly, snow-covered country close to the East German border. Pieces of clothing, presumably from the passengers' baggage, were found in several neighbouring villages.

A rescue worker who saw the bodies yesterday before they were removed said that together they "hardly amounted to an armful." They included two small children, he said.

The bomb explosion in the train was less serious. The blast occurred early yesterday in the penultimate carriage of a train travelling from Ljubljana to Belgrade, near the entrance to the station of Dobova, in the territory of Croatia.

The six injured persons, all Yugoslavs, were released from hospital after treatment. The coach was badly damaged.

In Copenhagen, the police intelligence service said yesterday that police in Denmark and Sweden were investigating the possibility of sabotage either at Stockholm or Copenhagen airports. The Danish and Swedish police are already on the alert in connection with the activities of the Ustashi Croatian nationalists.

Danish intelligence received a tip last week that the movement was planning to assassinate Yugoslav Minister of State Djemal Bijedic, who visited Copenhagen for the funeral on Monday of King Frederick of Denmark.

In Malmoe, Sweden, an anonymous man claiming to represent a Croatian extremist group telephoned a newspaper office and took responsibility for the airline crash, saying it had been sabotaged with a time-bomb.

Vietcong, Hanoi agree to study Nixon plan

PARIS. — North Vietnam and the Vietcong said yesterday they would study President Nixon's eight-point Vietnam peace plan though they assailed the U.S. President for supporting the Saigon regime.

North Vietnamese chief negotiator Xuan Thuy said after yesterday's session of the Vietnam peace talks here that he had followed with careful attention the eight-point plan.

After hearing explanations given by chief U.S. negotiator William Porter, at yesterday's 132nd session of the talks, Mr. Thuy told reporters, "We realize more clearly that the U.S. is determined to keep a force in South Vietnam and to maintain at all costs the Saigon regime."

But he added, "We shall continue to study the U.S. plan and will comment further at the next session."

Vietcong delegate Nguyen Van Thien also said he would study the U.S. plan further, though he told reporters that Mr. Porter had not answered seriously questions which had been put to him on fundamental matters.

Vietcong delegation spokesman Ly Van Sau said the two key questions — withdrawal of U.S. forces and an end to all U.S. support for the present Saigon government — were linked.

During yesterday's four-and-a-half hour session, Mr. Porter said that the U.S. was prepared to be flexible on the eight-point peace plan and a nine-point peace programme put forward by the Communists which is still being kept secret.

The Nixon peace plan was formally presented at yesterday's session by Saigon delegate Pham Dang Lam, on behalf of his government and the U.S.

Mr. Thuy told the meeting that the Nixon plan was a smoke screen and did "nothing but hold out bright prospects of a sham peace" during the U.S. electoral period. But, as with previous critical reaction from Hanoi and the Vietcong, he did not actually reject the plan.

In essence, the Nixon plan promises to end the war through a complete U.S. military pullout and exchange of prisoners within six months of an agreement followed by new, free presidential elections.

"This proposal is comprehensive in nature, covering military and political issues," Mr. Porter said. "After signature, we would proceed to negotiate further on the implementation of the various elements of the agreement."

Mr. Porter said the U.S. and Saigon governments were aware that negotiating on some aspects of the agreement in principle could prove more difficult and complex than on others and might require more time.

"We" would be willing, therefore, once there is overall agreement in principle, to begin implementing certain military aspects of the agreement, such as those affecting withdrawals and prisoners, while we continued to negotiate on other aspects," he said.

In connection with troop withdrawals he made clear that although they could start on the date of the agreement in principle, they would not be totally completed before a final agreement on all aspects of the proposal was signed. (Reuters, UPI)

He will also go to several Arab nations and other "friendly states," the newspaper said.

"Al Ahran" did not give a specific date for Sadat's trip but diplomatic sources said it will be next Tuesday. (Going to check, p. 12)

Wage talks collapse on brink of signing

JERUSALEM POST REPORTER
TEL AVIV. — With the stage set for signing the national wage contract yesterday, talks with negotiators invited for the occasion, the talks between the Histadrut and the employers collapsed.

Three hours of deliberations led to a rift on practically all the issues. This sudden turn confounded all observers and perhaps the participants themselves who throughout the week had cited the convergence between the Histadrut and the employers.

The employers yesterday, represented by Mr. Zalman Susayef, also refused to sign an interim agreement on the cost-of-living allowance. The employers say it should be part of the general contract.

An explosion took place last night at an embankment near the municipality, about 40 kms. south of Beirut. An official statement said there were no casualties or damage, and the incident was being investigated.

In the wake of the breakdown of yesterday's talks, the President of the Manufacturers' Association has scheduled an urgent meeting for today.

After Gromyko visit Moscow, Tokyo agree to hold peace talks

TOKYO (Reuter). — The Soviet Union and Japan have agreed to start negotiations for a peace treaty before the end of the year, Japanese Foreign Minister Takeo Fukuda said yesterday.

He told a press conference after talks with visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko that it had yet to be decided whether the talks, formally ending World War Two hostilities between the two countries, would be held in Moscow or Tokyo.

Motion on Syrian Jews in House of Commons

LONDON (INA). — A motion was tabled in the House of Commons yesterday by Mr. Reginald Green drawing attention to the desperate plight of Syrian Jews. The measure calls upon the Syrian Government to release the innocent prisoners; to permit those who want to leave the country to do so, in accordance with the universal Declaration of Human Rights; to remove the ban on the import of religious objects for Jews; and to curb vandalism.

Swiss report progress on Hughes 'mystery woman'

CLIFFORD and EDITH IRVING

ZURICH (UPI). — Swiss police said yesterday they have made some progress in tracing the mystery woman in the Howard Hughes autobiography case, but now urgently need the help of the FBI in Washington.

Police said they now know the hotel used three times by Helga R. Hughes as she waited in Zurich for three cheques totalling $650,000 to be cleared by the Credit Bank. These cheques were made out by the McGraw Hill Publishing Company for "H.R. Hughes."

Police said they are not identifying the hotel but can confirm they showed staff photographs of Mrs. Edith Irving, Swiss wife of American author Clifford Irving who wrote the purported Howard Hughes book.

ty unless the Soviet Union agreed to return four former Japanese islands the Russians have occupied since World War Two.

He said the two governments had not yet reached any agreement on the territorial issue.

Japan has insisted on the return of the four North Pacific islands of Habomai, Shikotan, Kunashiri and Etorofu. But until Mr. Gromyko's visit to Tokyo, the Soviet Union has refused to discuss the issue.

Mr. Fukuda said: "The Japanese stand remains unchanged, but I cannot say how if the Japanese attitude may change in the course of the coming negotiations."

Gromyko came to Japan Sunday to hold the first consultations between Russian and Japanese Foreign Ministers in five years.

Moscow's desire for closer ties with Tokyo stem in part from moves by both Japan and the U.S. towards rapprochement with China. It also wants Japan to help exploit its Siberian resources.

But Western diplomats here say it is premature to talk about a Tokyo-Moscow axis developing as a counter to the strengthening of relations between Washington and Peking marked by President Nixon's impending visit to China.

REVIVAL ATTEMPT — New York firemen try unsuccessfully to revive Iris Kones after blast in the offices of impresario Sol Hurok on Wednesday.

Special squad to probe bombing of Hurok office

NEW YORK (Reuter). — Police have established a special crime squad to track down those responsible for the fire bombing of the offices of impresario Sol Hurok, importer of Soviet entertainers. One person was killed and 13 injured in the blaze.

The creation of the special squad was announced by chief of detectives Albert Seedman, who said the firebombers acted similarly to napalm. He said the heat was so intense that typewriters melted in two offices. This type of incendiary bomb is virtually impossible to put out with conventional fire extinguishers, he declared.

His senior officer, Police Commissioner Patrick Murphy, labelled the death as "outrage murder."

At about the time the bomb exploded in Mr. Hurok's 20th-floor office in a Manhattan skyscraper, another bomb went off in a nearby office building. Anonymous callers telephoned news organizations and said: "Cultural bridges will not be built over the bodies of Soviet Jews. Never again."

The phrase "never again" is used by the Jewish Defence League, which in the past has harassed Soviet officials in this country. But spokesman for the organization denied responsibility for the bombings.

Killed was a 27-year-old receptionist in Mr. Hurok's office, Iris Kones. She died of smoke inhalation. Hurok himself was one of the 13 injured. He was treated briefly at a hospital and went home.

Mr. Hurok, 83, who is himself a Jew born in Russia, is perhaps the African leader claims 100 held in Rhodesia

SALISBURY (Reuter). — An African nationalist leader claimed yesterday that more than 100 active supporters of the African National Council — key rallying point for African resistance to the Rhodesian independence settlement proposals — were being held by police.

The ANC leader, lawyer Edson Sithole, said the Council would be making strong representations to the British Peace Commission to get Ian Smith's government to cease its arrests and give the anti-settlement movement wider freedom.

The ANC chairman, Bishop Abel Muzorewa, said: "People are being arrested all over the country. However, the ANC is determined, in spite of this intimidation by the government, to continue to come up with their 'no'."

AT U.N. AFRICA MEETING Rhodesia to top OAU demands

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia, (AP). — Independent and Black Africa yesterday put Rhodesia at the top of the list of resolutions it wants from the U.N. Security Council session starting here today.

A spokesman reported broad agreement in a caucus of more than 20 African nations to press for two resolutions on Rhodesia — an immediate proposal presumably dealing with the recent violence in the breakaway British colony and a later one covering basic constitutional issues. "We are giving priority to Rhodesia," he said.

African spokesman condemned Security Council resolution condemning the settlement with Rhodesia. Some Africans said they thought that Britain would be reluctant to use its veto against an African vote, and that the Council sessions could produce agreement on practical ideas for action against colonialism and discrimination.

U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim, flying in from Rome, told newsmen at Role Airport that he hoped the Council would reach "unanimous decisions" on southern African problems.

"The main reason to hold this meeting in Africa, here in Addis Ababa, was of course to be nearer to the hot-spots — the areas of tension and of conflict."

"The Council will, of course, deal with these problems in southern Africa and I hope very much it will be possible for the Council to achieve unanimous decisions in this respect."

Another arrival was President Moktar Ould Daddah of Mauritania, expected to be the principal O.A.U. spokesman during the debate.

Mr. Waldheim and others were received quickly, but Emperor Haile Selassie rolled out a red carpet and a military band in the brilliant Ethiopian sunshine to greet Mr. Daddah at the airport as a head of state.

Mr. Waldheim, who later had a private audience with the Emperor, told newsmen he had a "very interesting conversation" with President Nixon in Washington on Monday, before coming here.

"We exchanged views on all the important questions confronting the U.N.," he said. "President Nixon assured me of his full support on my efforts to restore the solvency of the U.N. and most of all to restore confidence in the U.N."

Moroccan army trials begin next week

RABAT, Morocco (AP). — More than 1,000 Moroccan soldiers, including a dozen officers, go on trial for their lives on Monday in connection with the abortive coup against King Hassan, government sources said here.

Most of the 1,033 accused were members of the Moroccan Army's training school for non-commissioned officers who burst in on the King's birthday party last July 10 and killed more than 100 of his guests and servants.

Four generals were executed by firing squads three days after the coup. Some of the officers at the mass trial starting Monday before a military court in nearby Kenitra are accused of helping to organize the coup.

The coup leaders were mostly wealthy men who denied they planned to set up a Libyan-style revolutionary regime, but merely wanted to put a stop to widespread official corruption in Morocco. Since the coup attempt, the King has introduced sweeping reforms and ordered the arrest of hundreds of allegedly corrupt officials.

Nixon sees improved U.S. economy

WASHINGTON (Reuter). — President Nixon yesterday forecast a year of vigorous growth for the American economy and a substantial cut in the present six per cent unemployment rate.

In his annual economic message to Congress, the President emphasized that an improvement in the employment situation, a key election issue, had top priority in fiscal and monetary policies.

An accompanying report by the President's Council of Economic Advisors put the administration's target at a five per cent unemployment rate by the end of this year, a full one per cent below the present level.

"Output is rising at a rate which will boost employment rapidly and eat into unemployment. There is every reason to expect this rate of increase to continue," Mr. Nixon said.

The President is also seeking to reduce inflation to between two and three per cent by the end of the year.

The Council of Economic Advisors' report forecast that the economy would grow by six per cent in real terms this year after allowance for an expected average inflation rate of 3 1/2 per cent.

In money terms this would be a record growth of $100,000 million, bringing the value of all goods and services produced in the U.S. this year to about $1,145,000 million.

Nixon 'to dismiss FBI's Hoover'

CHICAGO (AP). — The "Chicago Tribune" said Wednesday night that it had learned that J. Edgar Hoover is to be dismissed as director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation after the U.S. presidential election in November.

A dispatch from its Washington correspondent quoted high Nixon Administration sources as saying Hoover will either resign or be put into a "chairman's" job by the end of the year.

"Hoover will not be allowed to last as long as he wants," the source quoted one Administration official as saying.

HANOI AND THE NIXON PROPOSALS New Vietnam flare-up expected

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
NEW YORK (AP). — Despite President Nixon's Indo-China peace proposal, there seems a clear danger that the war will be intensified, although perhaps only briefly.

Behind this sort of assessment is the fact that Hanoi apparently sets the U.S. proposals as signifying a flagging American will to continue involvement much longer. Hanoi apparently has high hopes for its cause in the U.S. campaign for the presidential elections.

"The present situation is creating a great many new advantages for our armed forces," Gen. Song Hiao told a Hanoi newspaper earlier this month. That sounded ominous in the light of reports of a new Communist build-up in Vietnam.

Gen. Hiao indicated what was on Hanoi's mind when he said that the Americans "are defeated and are therefore forced to change their strategy." This meant, he added, that North Vietnam was "faced with a new situation with many advantages and bright prospects," although there still would be hardships.

The general must have been aware of Nixon's proposals, and what he seemed to say in effect was: "Why settle for less if there's a chance to get it all?"

Perhaps it is all Hanoi talk, and perhaps there is still hope for the Nixon proposals, but on the surface it seems that the North Vietnamese and Vietcong intend to hold out for a good deal more than is being offered.

The snags in the way of peace are clear.

"Withdrawal" means a different thing for each side. The Americans see it as meaning the withdrawal of all U.S. forces and equipment. For the Communists it means withdrawal of everything: all equipment, all weapons and dismantlement of all bases, "without any conditions whatever."

Mr. Nixon says he would withdraw U.S. forces totally within six months of an agreement. The other side wants a date for total withdrawal first. Then it will talk about other matters.

The Communists are also unlikely to agree to unfettered, internationally-supervised elections.

An internationally guaranteed cease-fire would mean no more North Vietnamese infiltration of the South and of Laos and Cambodia. To Hanoi this means surrendering a strong position, it says acceptance of this idea would mean "taking away the right of self-defence of the people of South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia."

The North is putting out the word that it is ready to fight on "as long as a single aggressor remains in our country" and as long as Thieu remains a political power. As Gen. Hiao put it, the North and its Vietcong allies still must "experience many difficulties, hardships and sacrifices" because ahead of them will be new "tests of strength" that will be both difficult and complex.

U.S. HIJACKER SHOT DEAD

POUGHKEEPSIE, New York (Reuter). — A man who hijacked a Mohawk Airlines plane over New York State was shot dead as he stepped off the aircraft here yesterday.

The hijacker, who said he had a bomb and a gun, forced the plane to take off from Purchase, New York, taking three air crew as hostages, after obtaining a ransom of $200,000 and two parachutes.

The plane left Purchase, for an undisclosed destination, after a seven-hour confrontation on the tarmac. Another Mohawk aircraft took off in pursuit.

The hijacker commandeered the plane on Wednesday night as it flew between Albany, New York State, and New York City's La Guardia Airport. It was diverted to Purchase, where the 43 passengers were allowed to disembark.

Before the plane left Purchase, the young hijacker held a terrified stewardess at gunpoint and locked the pilot and co-pilot in the flight cabin.

He forced the plane to leave after airline officials delivered the $200,000 cash ransom.

The hijacker claimed he was a professional parachutist and was reported to have told airport officials that he would force the stewardess, Eileen McAllister, to bale out with him when the plane was airborne.

After leaving Purchase, the hijacker forced the plane to fly north over Pittsfield, Massachusetts, then west to Albany, and then south again to Poughkeepsie.

None of the three crew members aboard the plane was injured when the drama ended at Dutchess County Airport near Poughkeepsie.

55 kms. north of New York City, with the shooting of the hijacker. A spokesman for the sheriff's office said the hijacker, before he was shot, demanded a car at the airport and indicated that he planned to use the stewardess as a hostage.

The shooting ended a nine-hour ordeal for the stewardess, pilot Carl Reith and co-pilot William O'Hara. Conversations monitored by reporters at Westchester Airport, Purchase, indicated that the FBI wanted to put an agent on the plane, but decided against it after the hijacker showed a threatening manner.

"He's very, very, very upset," the pilot said. "He's chewing ice to stay cool."

Reith and O'Hara tried to negotiate with the man behind a locked cockpit door at the Westchester airport, when he finally gave them a two-minute deadline to take off.

"He's given us two minutes to take off," Reith said over the cockpit radio. "His only instructions are not to fly above 15,000 feet."

Big Israel display at Berlin 'Green Fair'

By BRIAN ARTHUR
Jerusalem Post Correspondent
WEST BERLIN. — Israel exporters will have a major display at this year's international "green week" Agricultural Fair in West Berlin, which opens today.

The fair, with 1,452 exhibitors from 41 countries, is aimed directly at 60 million West German consumers and particularly at over two million prosperous West Berliners.

Israel exporters will show a broad spectrum of fresh, frozen and canned foods over a pavilion area of 500 square metres.

Since this is a consumer fair, publicity gimmicks play a major role among all the exhibitors, and Israel is no exception. Today the Israel Citrus Marketing Board will elect "Miss Jaffa of Germany 1972" from German girls selling Israel oranges in distributor chain stores.

Turkey sausage

An attempt will be made at the fair to bring turkey-meat sausage from Israel on to German dining tables. Israel's Trade Attache in Bonn, Mr. Baruch Schaeffer, considering a dubious visitor who wondered if turkey-meat could compete with the Germany's traditional "bratwurst," said: "We could do a million dollar business in Germany if E.E.C. tariffs on turkey meat were not so high."

Mr. Schaeffer stressed that the fair was not oriented to the E.E.C. but to the German consumer.

Total West German imports from Israel from January to September of 1971 amounted to about $24m. marks compared with 248 million for the corresponding period of 1970. Of these figures, agricultural products represented 158 million marks last year and 140 million the year before.

The Israel Pavilion is being sponsored by the Israel Company for Fairs and Exhibitions. The Fair itself will be opened by the West German Agricultural Minister Josef Ertl and will be attended by the Agricultural Ministers of the other European Common Market countries.

A FRESH LOOK AT CHINA

By JACK MAURICE
Jerusalem Post Correspondent
PARIS. — The 65-year-old former French Prime Minister, believes that 1972 is going to mark a turning-point in relations between Asia and the Western world. M. Mendes-France's opinion is based on what he has just seen and heard during a six-week tour which has taken him to China, Japan, Burma and India.

Mendes was particularly eager to take a fresh look at China. He previously found himself there in May, 1958, at the very moment when General de Gaulle was brought back to power by a military coup d'etat in Algeria. Many Frenchmen still believe that if Mendes had been in Paris at that moment instead of in Peking, the Fifth Republic might not have been imposed on France so easily. We shall probably never know. I was the Reuter correspondent in China at the time, and broke the news of the Gaoilist coup to the world.

Mendes at his hotel in Peking. He concealed his surprise brilliantly and refused to make any comment, explaining: "I never pass judgments on events in France while I'm abroad."

Mendes-France... Chinese Impressions

"When the countries of Asia become aware that the big powers are not bullying or exploiting them, material and economic problems will no longer cause the tensions and tragedies which Asia is suffering from today.

"In the present sorry, bitter and tense state of relations between China and the Soviet Union, the fear of attack is up-rooted in their minds. Officials steered every conversation round to this topic, whatever we happened to be talking about at the time."

Mendes added: "The Chinese interpreted the Pakistani-Indian war as an effort by the Soviet Union to use the help it gave India and Bangla-Desh as a means of establishing a new ring of bases in Asia. They claim that the Soviets have now set up a 'lower jaw' of bases in southern Asia, which they can link to the northern tier which already exists."

Mendes said that whenever he asked about President Nixon's impending visit to China, his hosts replied: "Mr. Nixon asked to come and, since we are polite people, we had no reason to refuse. Now we shall have to wait and hear what he has to tell us."

Remove suspicion

Mendes will be very surprised indeed if, after their four-day meeting, Mr. Nixon and Chairman Mao are able to announce agreement on such issues as Formosa and Vietnam. The French politician believes, however, that the talks will clear the air and remove misunderstanding and suspicion between China and the U.S.

"These talks," he said, "could help to produce a working timetable, which would be elaborated over a period of several months, and be a first step towards solving the problems at stake."

"This will obviously involve the withdrawal of all American troops from the Asian continent and the reunification of continental China and Formosa. The Americans can have no illusions about this. But in return the Chinese, once they are satisfied that what they call imperialism has been removed from their frontiers, ought to be able to provide satisfactory guarantees for the United States."

'Radical Zionists' against Israel

By HENRIETTE BOAS
Jerusalem Post Correspondent
AMSTERDAM. — The influence of the "Radical Zionists" on public opinion in Holland is much greater than their negligible numbers might suggest.

Calling themselves "Critical Zionists," in line with various other Dutch protest and action groups such as "Critical Students," "Critical Artists" and even "Critical Teachers," the group's primary pre-occupation is of course criticism — of Israel. In Zionist circles in Holland — of whom they are thoroughly contemptuous, even publicly referring to them as "little ghetto Jews" — they made a brief splash during 1968-70, when after having banded together to refute the pro-Palestinian propaganda in left-wing student circles after the Six Day War, they became influenced by their opponents' arguments.

In May 1971, they caused tension and unpleasantness at the Netherlands Zionist Organization Conference, when they insisted that the aims of the N.Z.E. should include "support to all liberation movements in the world, including those of the Palestinian Arabs." Though they were overwhelmingly defeated, they caused the fall of the then executive.

Three days after the annual conference, an article appeared in the weekly "Haagse Post" containing vehement attacks on Zionism in general and Zionism in Holland in particular, on Holland's Jews and on the State of Israel, its government and its establishment. The article was signed by Eddo Rosenthal and Mattanya de Vries. Eddo Rosenthal, who is 25, and Mattanya de Vries, 20, are students who went to Israel some six months ago. Another "Critical Zionist" member, Jaap van Wesel, now in his late 20s, completed his law studies in Amsterdam before going to Israel some three years ago. All three are correspondents of Dutch newspapers and broadcasting organizations, and they use their positions to reveal to the Dutch the "evils" of Israel society, the discrimination against Arabs and Oriental Jews, the injustice of trying to resettle Jews in East Jerusalem, etc.

Jaap van Wesel, who originally wrote an occasional article in the "progressive" Roman Catholic weekly "De Nieuwe Linie," is now a correspondent for the socialist broadcasting organization V.A.R.A., as well as of a group of some 12 widely-read provincial dailies belonging to the so-called "Great Provincial Daily Press" (G.P.D.), wholly or partly replacing their former correspondents in Israel, who apparently were not "critical" enough.

Eddo Rosenthal has become the correspondent of the "progressive" Protestant broadcasting organization (radio and TV) I.K.O.R. and of the weekly "Haagse Post." Mattanya de Vries occasionally writes in "De Nieuwe Linie."

Accent on industry

Fortunately, Mendes is much more forthcoming with his impressions of China as it is today. "What struck me most forcibly," he says, "was that in contrast with the emphasis they placed on agriculture thirteen years ago, the accent this time was on industry. On my first trip they were very proud of their steel plants. Since then they have increased steel production twenty-fold. In 1958 all their oil came from the Soviet Union; now China supplies all its own oil requirements."

"However, the visitor is never allowed to forget the Chinese obsession with the fear of aggression. Last time I was there they were all talking about an imminent attack from the United States. Now the favourite theme is the risk of aggression from the Socio-Imperialists."

PINCUS REPLIES

HOUSING FOR YOUNG COUPLES

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, With reference to your report of January 24, "Some hope for newly-weds in Jerusalem," may we point out that approximately 1,100 candidates registered for the housing programme for young couples set up jointly by the Jerusalem Municipality and the Contractors' and Builders' Association. After careful scrutiny and on the basis of approved criteria 78 of these candidates were picked for the first available apartments. They were selected from among the 1,100 candidates registered with this scheme, and not from 2,000 candidates, which include those registered with the Ministry of Housing, which has a separate programme for young couples.

The municipal programme offers only a partial solution to the problems of young couples with limited resources and is not meant to solve the housing problems of all of Jerusalem's newly-weds.

YITZHAK GROSSMANN,
Spokesman,
Jerusalem Municipality
Jerusalem, January 24.

The Jerusalem Post regrets the confusion created by the pooling of two different programmes and is glad to report that, under these circumstances, some of the young couples registered with the Municipality will not have to wait until their golden wedding anniversary for an apartment, but will be able to celebrate their silver wedding anniversary in their own home.

'Anecdotal material' in the Goldmann speech

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, Despite my long personal and public association with Dr. Nahum Goldmann, I am duty bound as Chairman of the Executive of the World Zionist Organization, to reply to the letter of the President of the Board of Deputies of British Jews, Mr. Michael M. Fidler, which appeared in your column on January 26, 1972.

The debate concerning Dr. Goldmann's London address has been projected by Mr. Fidler as an issue of fact, as to whether or not the World Jewish Congress release contains the entire Goldmann speech.

In this connection, Mr. Fidler refers to the transcript of Dr. Goldmann's speech taken at the time it was delivered. His conclusion is that "apart from occasional repetition and anecdotal material which alone have been eliminated, the report (of the World Jewish Congress) is correct and complete with no important cuts whatsoever."

It is with great reluctance that I submit for publication the specific anecdotal material eliminated in the text released by the World Jewish Congress so that the reader may judge for himself whether or not the deletion is an "important cut." The transcript read as follows:

"A Soviet diplomat once on the joking side, said to me (Dr. Goldmann). 'You know our policy in Stalin's day — we would have shot these people; they would not have opened their mouths,' which is true, they didn't. In Khrushchev's day we would have sent them to Siberia. Today we send them to so-called 'sanatoria', what you call insane asylums. For us, Israel is an insane asylum. Let them go there.'"

If Dr. Goldmann's remarks evoked shock and dismay among members of the Zionist Executive who merely read this "anecdote," the question is: What was the reaction of the audience and the members of the press whose presence was known to the speaker? Apparently, a standing ovation.

It was decided, for reasons clear to everyone, to delete this repulsive and scandalous story which for the teller is, unfortunately, nothing more than a "nasty joke." We believe that there is a time and place for everything including anecdotes; especially those which cut savagely into the sinews of our people in the Soviet Union who are engaged in a daily struggle for freedom — as they see it — joining their people in their historic homeland. Jokes of this kind only denigrate the heroism of this struggle.

The occasion for the address was not a private intimate circle, nor a social gathering, but a public forum under the auspices of a distinguished body representative of the whole of British Jewry.

Is this the proper setting for a Jewish leader to quip about a great human drama which has inspired Israel and world Jewry and has added new dimensions to Zionism in our generation? Is it merely a question of poor taste or does it perhaps also reflect an attitude of indifference to the harmful and dangerous consequences of gratuitous talk?

I suggest to Mr. Fidler that he re-read his memory of the London meeting by re-reading the full transcript of the address because as he so aptly writes in his letter to The Post: "While comment is free, facts are sacrosanct."

LOUIS A. PINCUS,
Chairman,
The Executive of the Jewish Agency
Jerusalem, January 26.

LABELLING DETERS FREE SPEECH

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, — I realize that in this state of democratic free choice, it may be hard to conceive of people acting not out of affiliation to a political party, but out of a sense of social conscience. However, I feel it necessary to inform you of the fact that not all the people involved in either the demonstration at the beginning of the 28th Zionist Congress or at the demonstration on January 24 are from either Siach, Mafam, Matspen or the Black Panthers, as you seem to suggest in your report of January 25.

Many, if not the majority, of the people present on both these occasions were people concerned by the problems facing the State of Israel, the negative attitude which the Government is employing to look at these problems, and the means by which the police reinstate law and order before there has been a disruption of it.

Because of labelling of the kind in your reports, people truly concerned by the events of the present are deterred from expressing their opinions en masse for fear of being told they are part of a Matzpen, anti-Zionist political demonstration, or some such thing, due to the unnecessary and exorbitant publicizing of this handful of anti-Zionists.

I, and many others, students and citizens of this country, are also concerned with its problems. Allow us to voice our opinions under our own name and not that conveniently prepared by somebody else. As a point of fact, the licence for the demonstration of January 24 was given to the Independent Socialist Zionists and not to the parties or groups you mentioned.

STEPHEN DENENBERG
Jerusalem, January 25.

T.A. engineering studies

To the Editor of The Jerusalem Post: Sir, — In your issue of January 7, you published a letter by Mr. I. Shulman containing a number of inaccuracies.

1. Tel Aviv University, being a recognized institute of higher learning, is empowered to introduce at any time any degree it deems appropriate, in engineering as well as in other fields.

2. M.Sc. and Ph.D. degrees in Engineering Science were introduced at Tel Aviv University two years ago and in fact, the first M.Sc. student was graduated last July. These programmes have been administered by the Department of Engineering Sciences within the Faculty of Science.

3. The report of the Patinkin Committee referred to by Mr. Shulman was submitted as a recommendation to the Government which decided that an undergraduate programme should receive Governmental financial support at Tel Aviv University, starting with the academic year 1972-73. It should be emphasized that this Government decision had a bearing only upon financial support and not upon the right of the University to offer any programme it felt desirable. Contrary to others, the University chose to abide by the wishes of the Government and of the Minister of Education, and to delay its plans.

4. On July 1, 1971, the plans which had been under consideration for two years were put into effect. A School of Engineering was created, having as its nucleus the Department of Engineering Sciences referred to above. It was planned that the undergraduate engineering programme would get started in the fall of 1972.

5. At the request of the Minister of Education and in order to avoid unnecessary hardship to students, Tel Aviv University accepted, in August 1971, to integrate the Holon Institute into its School of Engineering. The recent Government decision of December 5, 1971, recognizing the former Holon students as students of Tel Aviv University, thereby legalizes their status and thus enables them to receive accredited degrees, and to be eligible for the necessary financial support.

6. The merger agreed upon by the University President and the Mayor of Holon adds the Holon Institute as a second campus of the School of Engineering, to be known as Tel Aviv University — School of Engineering — Holon Institute of Technology. This campus will house certain activities as specified by the Dean of the School of Engineering. The details of this integration are being worked out both by Prof. Y. Ne'eman, President of the University, and by Professor M.A. Brill, Dean of the School of Engineering.

Any official statements concerning either campus of the School of Engineering will come from the Dean's Office, the Office of the President of Tel Aviv University, or the Public Relations Office at Tel Aviv University; the Holon campus does not have its own public relations office.

THOR HEYERDAHL COMING TO LECTURE

TEL AVIV. — Thor Heyerdahl, of Kon Tiki and Ra fame, will be coming to Israel next month.

Busy days for bridge players

By GEORGE LEVINREW
Jerusalem Post Bridge Columnist

WINTER is the busy bridge tournament season, and the month of January has seen several major championships decided. Additionally, 40 of the country's leading players are currently engaged in an extensive trial to choose the team that will represent Israel at the World Bridge Olympiad, to be held in Miami in June.

Katz and Hoffman, a Tel Aviv pair, won the National Pairs Championship, held on January 8 at the King Saul Hotel in Ashkelon. Schwartz-Shuster of Tel Aviv were second, and Sandler-Levy of Netanya finished third. The Ashkelon club, which was host for the event, is a new one, but it already has about 60 active members.

Twenty-eight teams participated in the first kibbutz Team of Four championships, held at Tzora on January 15. The teams came from 24 kibbutzim: Ashdot Ya'akov (Meuhad), Beit Ha'emek, Hatzirim, Degania A, Dovrat, Givat Brenner, Gonen, Yizrael, Kfar Blum, Kfar Hanassi, Mishmerot, Mahanaim, Magen, Merhavia, Metzuba, Mishmar Ha'emek, Mismerot, Nahshon, Neve Eitan, Palmachim, Sdot Yam, Sha'ar Hagolan, Tel Katzir, and Tzora. Winners were a combined Kfar Eitan-Gonen team from the Upper Galilee, with a Tzora four second and a Kfar Blum aggregation third. The winners won a free entry to the Adler Cup Team of Four Tournament, which takes place this weekend at the Hotel Panorams in Jerusalem.

In the National Team trials, the veteran four Rand, Katz, Duchovny and Kapusta lead after the first round. Second are Ameri-Rosenthal-Kenn-Lustiger, with Glaubach-Birman-Meltzer Bardach in third place.

A new work by Orgad

The Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, Musica Viva, Concert No. 2, Conductor: Leif Segerstam. Soloists: Menahem Breuer, Violin; The Jerusalem Chamber Choir, led by Azeez Iqbal (Tel Aviv, Mezan Auditorium, January 22). Ensemble: Essence of Synagogue Music; Orgad: Ballad for Orchestra; Penderecki: Capriccio for Violin and Orchestra; Foss: Paradigm for percussion; conductor, electric guitar and any other three instruments.

Music Reviews

To open this concert with the noble music of the Renaissance was a splendid idea, but the performance of the three Rassi pieces by the Jerusalem Chamber Choir was inexcusably poor. The choir's sound was flat and pale, and balance between male and female voices was uneven. The questionable addition of the brass instruments, with their festive and lustuous sound, emphasized the choir's poor quality.

The main work of the evening, Orgad's new composition, Ballad for Orchestra, does not break new ground in melody, rhythm and instrumentation, but it is, nevertheless, effective work. Orgad does not seem to be concerned too much with detail; he aims at an overall effect, which he achieves with remarkable success. At the start, the music's motion is limited, but gradually it gains momentum, until finally a tremendous contrapuntal climax is reached. Then it all declines until it reaches a standstill. One of the work's most exciting moments was when the brass instruments, in the balcony, joined the widely spaced sound textures originating from the orchestra on the stage. There was perfect balance between the orchestra and the six brass players and it all sounded like a huge canonic antiphone of sound, melody and harmony.

Penderecki's work came as anti-climax, sounding empty after Orgad's absorbing music. Most of the solo passages were completely drowned, but I do not know if this was due to Mr. Breuer's small volume, Mr. Foss' over-loud accompaniment, or because I was seated directly in front of Mr. Breuer's musicstand, which may have acted as a sound barrier.

The conductor's own composition, "Paradigm," is an adventure hard to resist, for Mr. Foss perfectly integrated all the elements in his work. Barry Silverman brilliantly directed a group of four enthusiastic players: Yaacov Mense, cello; Avi Singer, electric guitar; Israel Zohar, clarinet; and Eddie Shafirovitz, electric organ.

PROFESSOR PREDICTS

Israel foreign debt will grow this year

By DAVID KRIVINE
Jerusalem Post Economic Correspondent
The balance of payments will not improve this year, and the country's foreign debt will grow from $3.250m. to $4,250m., Professor Michael Bruno, of the Hebrew University, predicted this week.

will swell by 10 per cent in volume, although they will bring an extra 14 per cent if measured in dollars. Similarly, imports will increase by 4 per cent in volume and 5 per cent in cash. This will widen the foreign deficit still further, to $1,500m., and half of that is financed by borrowing. In general, the good life will continue — but underlying distortions in the economy will remain without solution," Professor Bruno predicted.

'FANTASTIC WIRE-TAP SCANDAL' 'Haolam Hazeh' falls for student hoax

By YA'ACOV FRIEDLER

This harn the student image. The tapping also enabled the Union to "update" its information on each student and forestall wholesale cheating at examinations.

Further, the Union was able to offer well-paid jobs to students doing the "tapping," and so help them pay their way through school. He hinted that "someone" was footing the salary bill.

Rare Document Presented to the Diaspora Research Institute

By E. RON

TEL AVIV. — An imperial document written in 1791, in which the Austrian Emperor bestowed a baronetcy on a Jew, has been received by Tel Aviv University's School of Jewish Studies.

The important historical document is an 18-page bound booklet. It conferred the title on the Wertheimer family, one of the most prominent Jewish families during the time of the Austrian Empire.

It details the merits of Joseph Samuel Wertheimer. Its importance lies in the fact that it shows that special status was given to a Jew as early as the eighteenth century.

The rare document was presented by Prof. Shlomo Simonsohn, Head of the School of Jewish Studies and the Diaspora Research Institute and newly elected Rector of the University. The presentation was made by Dr. Dov Beigun, a member of the Executive Committee.

Sugar new heart disease suspect

By BARRY WILSON
SUGAR, for decades the sworn enemy of anyone trying to lose weight, now runs the risk of becoming unpopular on another count: its suspected connection with heart disease.

A team of medical and dietary experts sponsored by the British Government is now putting the finishing touches to a report on the subject. The prime mover in the study is John Yudkin, Professor of Nutrition at London University. Now, after two decades of simple faith in the animal fats story, medical opinion is increasingly conceding that the cause of heart disease is anything but straightforward.

For years medical experts have said that animal fats like butter are the prime dietary cause of heart disease. Now sugar is also suspect. Professor Yudkin concedes: "It is true that persons with high levels of blood cholesterol are at a higher risk of coronary heart disease. But are these phenomena related causally?" He holds obstinately to his belief that medical opinion has been "led up the garden path" over the cholesterol story.

KEREN HAYESOD—UNITED ISRAEL APPEAL WELCOMES FIRST ALL-EUROPEAN STUDY MISSION

Message From Keren Hayesod Chairman: GROWING NUMBER OF APPEALS SENDING STUDY MISSIONS

Through the years, we have endeavored to enable the leadership of our Appeals throughout the world to first learn information on the needs of our country and people. One of the best means for this is the Study Mission and we are glad of the opportunity to welcome the growing number of such missions.

OVER 100 CAMPAIGN LEADERS FROM MAJOR EUROPEAN COMMUNITIES PARTICIPATING IN MISSION
The first all-European Keren Hayesod—United Israel Appeal Study Mission to Israel arrived in the country this week for a whirlwind four-day visit at the personal invitation of Prime Minister Golda Meir.

Message From Jewish Agency Chairman: RATE OF IMMIGRATION AND COST OF ABSORPTION INCREASING

On behalf of the Jewish Agency for Israel, I am happy to welcome the present Keren Hayesod study mission to Israel. This past year has been one of historic significance in the solidarity of the entire Jewish people around Israel. The courage and fortitude of our brothers in the Soviet Union and the Arab States play an enormously important part in helping us to strengthen and define our purpose. The re-constitution of the Jewish Agency and its far-reaching ramifications strengthen the Jews of the free world in terms of responsibility and cooperation, far beyond any formal agreement.

This week in Israel

Congress ends

ONE of the noteworthy features of the Zionist Congress has been the sight of hundreds of Israeli pupils, who have come from all parts of the country to see the supreme Zionist body in action. It is hard to say whether they have been able to follow exactly what Congress stands for, and what exactly was going on in Binyanei Ha'ooma.

A great deal of the real business of the Congress is transacted in small rooms and corridors in the great building, or else in the lounges or rooms of the King David Hotel. In the hall they make great speeches about the ideological issues of the day; in the back rooms they bargain about portfolios and the realities of power, they engage in political huckstering which may remind cynics of Mahane Yehuda.

It is wrong to be cynical; these kind of deals are an essential part of the democratic process, they give it life and vigour. When nobody cared enough to want to be a member of the Executive, then would be the time to worry: this would be a sign that power was not worth having. When Mark Antony says that ambition is a dreadful thing, he is not really stating the truth; men like Churchill were ambitious, and they saved the world. On the other hand, Hitler and Stalin were ambitious. The real question is what people do to satisfy their urge to power.

One very disturbing factor at the Congress, according to the delegates from the English-speaking countries, was the strong and almost vicious anti-Diaspora feeling among the Israelis; both in the hall and the public galleries. When Chairman Arye Pincus and Foreign Minister Abba Eban tried to speak in English, they were literally howled down. It would be a great pity if the renewed era of Zionism was to end in an estrangement of the Diaspora through narrow-minded provincial pettiness on the part of Israelis. The truth is that the Diaspora needs Israel, and Israel needs the Diaspora — there is no need to throw bricks at each other across the Atlantic.

In fact, one of the most inspiring speeches was delivered by Mr. Pincus in English. Replying to the debate, he applied David Ben-Gurion's famous remark when World War II broke out shortly after Great Britain published its infamous White Paper: "We shall fight the War as if there were no war, and we shall fight the War as if there were no White Paper," said Mr. Ben-Gurion. Mr. Pincus said we must tackle immigration as if Israel had no social problems, and we must deal with social problems as if there were no immigration.

Many delegates said that the most original speech they heard was that of Moshe Dayan, the Minister of Defence, who spoke about the question of peace. He believed that a radical change had taken place in relations between Jews and Arabs, and it was possible to see hope of the two peoples living together peacefully in the end, although this happy state may not be reached for a long time.

A Jewish mine of information

THE modest ceremony last Monday at Beit Hanassi marking the completion of the 16-volume "Encyclopaedia Judaica" was, as Education Minister, Yigal Alon pointed out, first and foremost a Jewish event. Its essence is the unifying spirit of the Jewish, past and present, the world over.

For the first time, a compendium of Jewish learning has been prepared in a Jewish State, in Jerusalem, the shade of inspiration. It brought together under the aegis of Israel outstanding authorities of Jewish life in all its aspects. Sixty per cent of the Encyclopaedia was written in our country; the main centres of the research were the Hebrew University, the Israel Museum and Yad Vashem.

Thus the Encyclopaedia is the most feat of modern Israel. The Encyclopaedia does not stand for a new collection of knowledge about Jews, it marks the fact that the centre of Jewish learning is Jerusalem. Therein lies the importance of the English edition. The Encyclopaedists, inspired by Dr. Nahum Goldmann and spearheaded by the late Cecil Roth and Dr. Geoffrey Wigoder, have given a thorough Jewish interpretation of their aims. There was no Gentile influence to encroach on it, as might have happened over previous encyclopaedias published in the Diaspora.

SHMUEL KORNDORF

BOOK REVIEW:

A delight to begin

ACTIVE CONTEXT ENGLISH, by Ethel Brinton, Walter Plumb, Colin White, Paul Davies and John Shepherd. Macmillan Educational Limited 1971. Book I: 160 pages; Book II, 192 pages — price of each: 65 p. Tapes: £12.00.

MACMILLAN has issued two books for beginners — teenagers — which are a delight to look at and, I assume, to learn from. Five writers have built them after having, they say, successfully tested the material with more than 10,000 students. I am not going to recommend them instead of the books teachers are supposed to use here, but I strongly advise teachers to have a good look at them, and maybe to buy them, to enrich their own lessons.

These two books hold the interest of the learner by means of a "story" which links, as it were, the language teaching parts. The "story" is modern, human and interesting enough to make sense to any youngster of thirteen and persons (not heroes!) with whom a teenager can identify himself, and situations he encounters or may want to encounter. There are Barbara and Jimmy Miller, with their parents (who are however very much in the background); and there are Kate and Penny, all of whom meet other people, walk around, eat in restaurants, write letters, travel, go shopping, etc. In the second book the two girls, Kate and Penny, who live alone in London, have boyfriends, one of whom is nothing less than an actor on TV! Their activities become more interesting as the book proceeds: they have out-of-town drives and car trouble; they go to parties where drinks are served and sandwiches are passed around. But they also go to the public library and to concerts, and Kate is even a witness in court, as she has actually been present at a robbery.

This teaching around dynamic situations has the double advantage of allowing new material to be introduced appropriately in a familiar context, while structures already learnt are being unobtrusively but efficiently revised. All the new scrupulously graded structures and lexis are presented and can be practised in a wide range of oral exercises. The speech patterns introduced by the authors at a reasonable speed are adjusted to the constantly changing demands of the new "situations," and combine maximum student activity with lively, and supposedly efficient, learning.

A complete list of the words of each volume with phonetic transcription appears at the end, as well as the list of patterns and structures used.

THE FRIEND I LOVE

By LEA ENGLE (Grade 12) Hugin High School, Haifa.

HER brilliance shone... I raised my head to see the glory of her light. She brought life to my body to my soul. My mind was awakened, my eyes wouldn't let her go. As she rose, her form changed to one of elegance, of grace. In her path went memories — memories of good times, of happy days. She lit up the world — the leaves sparkled over the trees, the wind rustled through the branches. It was a splendid evening, one I didn't want to end, not ever.

There had been nights like this before, but this night seemed like the ultimate dream — so calm and peaceful.

In her, I saw a friend — one I could trust, one I could depend on. She would always be there in my hour of need. I could look at her face — into her eyes, tell her all my problems. To me, she meant questions answered, needs fulfilled.

But there's something funny about her. When she's gone, you love her, but when she's gone it's more than love — you get such a feeling you just can't do without her.

But you know you can depend on her, you know she'll be back. And with her will come good times, happy days, and tears of joy will fill your eyes. Yes, she's really something. It'll be nice to know that when man has destroyed earth completely, she'll still be there — there to depend on, to trust.

Isn't a full moon beautiful?

The youth look at the old men of over thirty

By MARC HALPERN (Grade 12) Ma'ale High School Jerusalem

IS today's youth misunderstood? This subject has become a central theme for discussion in contemporary life. I would like to present the issue from the following standpoint: are the "post-thirties" misunderstood by the young in the Promised Land?

Today's youth regards the 1936 Sinal Campaign, let alone the War of Independence or the Mandate, as old history. The youth of yesterday (today's over-thirty generation) struggled under difficult conditions with a feeling of national fervour. Now they feel a close national identification with the hard-earned soil of this land. It was their friends who drove the vehicles that ran the gauntlet through the Jerusalem corridor. They remember those who fell when they see the trucks left as memorials in the Shaar Haggal pass. All the young see are rusted wrecks.

On the Latrun road the Latrun police station is situated. I always gaze at the spot where War of Independence warriors lost their lives. But my Israeli peers don't even cast a glance in that direction. My Jerusalem friends regard the Holy City only as a home and nothing more.

The Israeli youth of today feels no emotion about Israel proper. In contrast, they feel extremely proud of the achievements in 1967 and the years that followed. They are attached to the territories because they fought so hard to overcome an enemy who outnumbered them.

Ironically, the young heroes of '67 take for granted the existence of a Jewish state in Israel — the result of a great effort by their predecessors.

In my opinion, the Israeli generation gap is partially due to a misunderstanding on the part of the youth about the accomplishments of their elders, who demand gratitude in vain for what they did in the past.

Will the naivety of today's youth lead to a surprise when their offspring betray no emotion when they pass Mount Scopus, Kufat Independence warriors lost

POP MUSIC REVIEW:

Some good records

By MARTIN DAVIDSON Jerusalem Post Pop Music Reporter

RCA Victor have produced their own version of "Mammy Blue" through their recording star James Darren, and I must say that it compares most favourably with all the other attempts. The record (RCA) sleeve is simply designed to match the melody, but it proves equally effective.

"Cyan," a new group of RCA's label, provides an interesting change with their release MIS-ALUBA. The Capanna brothers, together with "Chirpy Chirpy" producer Giacomo Tosti have, with three Britons and a Puerto Rican, distilled a formula with future. "The Guess Who" have had two quick releases — an EP titled "Raindance" (740322) and an LP "So Long Bannastras" (LSP-4574), after a year's break since their last album "Raindance" is a catchy rock-and-roll number composed in 15 minutes, according to the author. "Goin' a Little Crazy" is to be described best as a sort of miniature opera with plenty of strings giving the feeling of the chase and its ultimate climax. On another RCA, we come to the king of pop, Elvis. After his smash hit album "Love Letters" he has put out an EP 49-1017... called "It's Only Love." Take note, all Elvis fans... it's not often that Elvis goes so cheap. The music... typically Elvis. Another EP bound to attract attention is the Clodagh Rogers release, "Lady Love Bug" (RCA 2117) which sounds like an entry in a Eurovision Contest... actually it was planned for one. It didn't get to the contest, but since the singer liked it, she decided to cut a disc of it anyway.

My sick of the month of the RCA selections is "Mancini Concert" which is a masterpiece of orchestration of the popular works written by modern composers such as Simon and Garfunkel. There are selections too from James Christ Superstar and Tommy put together and played by Henry Mancini and his concert orchestra. Also the Long Play "The Middle of the Road" called just that — "Middle of the Road." The music to my mind is definitely not mediocre, if that is suggested by the title. "Chirpy Chirpy" has had world success, "Tweedie Dee Tweedie Dum" follows in its footsteps. "The Way on Life" and "The Sun in Your Skins" are reminders that the potential of this highly popular group is enormous.

NO EXCUSE TELEPHONED TELEPHONE

By OPHRA SITTON (Grade 12) Hugin High School, Haifa

TODAY, 4 1/2 years after the Six Day War, Israel has reached a blind alley, where on the one hand, her security situation becomes more serious and on the other hand, her position is very critical because of many internal problems.

It is high time to look for the causes of this bad situation, and to learn some lessons for the future.

Perhaps somebody will be surprised if I do not blame our troubles only on our security problems. The real cause of our difficulties, I think, is quite different. Throughout the years since the Six Day War, our Government has always excused all our weaknesses on the ground of our security situation. The people have got used to not criticizing the Government and to accepting all its acts, as if there were no other alternatives, because of the security situation.

For our Government this situation has been comfortable, because it didn't have to consider public opinion, and was free to do as she liked. Naturally, the Government wanted to take advantage of this situation, and so it did.

I think that after all the corruption which has been revealed in the administration of our Government, everyone has to be more critical of what is going on around him.

After all, we have seen that our critical security situation did not succeed in solving our internal problems.

By EFRAT PTINGER (Grade 12), Bar-Ilan Ely School, Nahariya.

A TELEPHONED telephone is a new invention of the 20th century. It is the telephone which you can see the person you are speaking to, although the person is on the other end of the telephone, and, of course the person sees you at the same time.

This invention has positive and negative aspects. It's good because conversations are more real and concrete as one can even show documents instead of reading them. One has fewer words and can make a shorter call. The caller can understand you better, and it is possible to see his reactions.

But there is so a negative side in a telephoned telephone. It disturbs your privacy because you can't hide a thing. Sometimes you aren't the state to be seen at all (not dressed, etc.), and then you can answer the phone and can be important calls. Worst of all, may happen you are speaking to a student. While speaking through a normal telephone you can make "faces" or throw glances to make the persons near you understand you would like to talk to the caller. You can even make angry faces or put out your tongue. But how can you do such things while standing before a telephoned telephone?

A telephoned telephone will thus be both a blessing and a curse, like most inventions.

How to reform the Zionist Congress

A PERSONAL VIEWPOINT

Misha Louvish, the writer of this article, has been behind the scenes, as editor, translator or interpreter, at every Zionist Congress since the 23rd, in 1951. He suggests specific proposals here for the reform of the Congress machinery to make it a more effective instrument of democratic discussion and decision.

radically revised to meet changing needs and circumstances. The reform of Congress procedures is a difficult and complex business, but one matter which needs priority attention is the "general debate" — that disjointed succession of speeches, nominally on a number of different subjects, to which an indifferent audience is subjected day after boring day. The great majority of these speeches are a sheer waste of time and effort, however admirable they may be in form or content. They are half-heard by a few hundred — sometimes a few dozen — people. Most of them are completely ignored by the press and radio (to say nothing of TV, which regards the World Zionist Congress as far less important than a mob of screaming, fist-waving schoolchildren). In the committee, the situation is only slightly better. After listening to official reports which should have been presented in writing, frustrated delegates follow at the plenary sessions, get up one after another and deliver their prepared speeches, so that the first day or two of the committee stage is often a continuation of the general debate. Meanwhile, a drafting committee prepares a long series of resolutions, most of which are mere strings of platitudes (and a Hebrew platitude literally translated into English is often incomprehensible to anyone but the initiated). Lastly, there is a hasty, often confused, discussion of amendments to the resolutions, as the committee works against time to prepare them for presentation to the plenary. Of course, there is no ideal way of tackling all the variegated tasks of a Zionist Congress within such a short space of time, but a few suggestions may indicate possible directions of reform. The first requisite is adequate preparation. At least two weeks before the Congress, delegates should receive reports from each department on the work done during the inter-Congress period, together with proposals that members of the Executive wish to be given consideration. Delegates should arrive three or four days before the opening, so that they have time to study the situation, think things out, and meet with their colleagues from other countries to prepare general lines of policy in advance. The general debate should be confined to one day after the opening session, subsequent evening sessions being devoted to outstanding issues and problems, very much on the present pattern. Four or five days should be given over entirely to the work of half a dozen large committees, each dealing with a group of subjects: education and youth; organization and finance; aliyah (including Youth Aliyah) and absorption; information and political activities; and so forth. During this period, there would be no plenary sessions, except in the evening. After a couple of days of review and discussion on questions of principle, each committee should split up into small sub-committees dealing with specific proposals. These would report back to the parent committee. Finally, a couple of days should be spent in considering the results of the committees' work in plenary session and in taking decisions on matters in dispute. With a procedure of this kind, more delegates could have their say — though not in the plenary — on the subjects closest to their hearts and all would be able to play an effective part in decision-making. No one would lose by the abolition of the tedious sham of the general debate.

Why has the 28th Zionist Congress failed to live up to the high hopes that were expressed before it convened? It was different in many ways from its predecessors: many of the delegates were elected instead of being nominated; there was a high proportion of new faces and young people. It was the first Congress for 50 years to welcome a large influx of immigrants from the Soviet Union, and, at the same time, the first to give serious attention to social strains and stresses in Israel itself. It thus had to grapple with two of the crucial problems of Israel in the '70s. And yet one heard many expressions of disappointment and impatience from delegates of all parties and all ages. The high lights — the opening session and the addresses by Golda Meir, Yigal Alon, Abba Eban and Moshe Dayan — drew large audiences, but there was only a demure interest in the steady, boring drip of speeches at the plenary sessions and there was a great deal of irritation at the complex procedure in the committees. Drastic changes are necessary if the Congress is to become an effective instrument of debate, consultation and democratic decision. The difficulties should be obvious, though they are often overlooked. Over 500 delegates come from some three dozen countries, representing a variety of parties and groups, speaking half a dozen different languages, ranging over the age-groups between the twenties and the eighties. This is no national parliament, whose members speak the same language — in more than the literal sense of the term — live in the same country under the same conditions all the year round, are organized in fairly homogeneous parties, and meet regularly to hammer out policies with their colleagues and submit to the test of debate with their opponents. It is the national assembly of what is probably the most heterogeneous people in the world, and the delegates include extremely contrasting types: religious leaders of all Jewish persuasions and near-hippie youngsters; Hadasah ladies and blunt abrahs; professional politicians and yesterday's arrivals from the Soviet Union; American businessmen and Israeli kibbutzniks. All these diverse individuals have something to say, and they want a chance to say it in public. They have to get organized in party caucuses, committees and ad hoc groupings. They have to get to know each other, particularly at a Congress with a high proportion of new faces. They have to draft proposals and discuss them both within their parties and in inter-party negotiations. They have to settle conflicting personal and party claims to office, influence and power. And all this within a period of less than ten days. The task would be quite impossible without detailed and binding procedures and regulations, but it is of the utmost importance that the rules should be thoroughly scrutinized and lessor issues have. Cannot we hope that the Prime Minister will follow up her public appeal by seeing that it is? The problem is too wide-spread, is accepted as the "norm," to be dealt with by an Ombudsman or State Comptroller. Unfortunately, the Knesset and by large, yes the Opposition included, seems just uninterested in taking up such "prosaic" matters. Inaction by Government and Knesset can only invite uncharitable thoughts that this is because those of the "establishment" are little affected personally, have aides and channels protecting them from the "justifiable bitterness and anger" referred to by Mrs. Meir. The fact is there exists considerable Governmental intervention in the private lives of citizens. This is a world trend, not to speak of our own special conditions. In this situation, the Government is doubly duty-bound to take steps to eliminate, or at least keep down, unwanted by-products and to set an example for public and private institutions. Nothing goes down better with the public than the sight of the Government putting its own house in order. It is time for the Government to take a hard look at the entire bureaucratic operation and decide on steps. The Jerusalem Post intends to circulate copies of this article to every member of the Cabinet. Each Minister will be invited to comment on two questions: 1. Do you think the Government should take action? 2. What is your Ministry doing, or planning to do, to improve the situation?

'Plastics Week' next month

Jerusalem Post Economic Correspondent TEL AVIV. — A display of articles produced by the Israeli plastics industry will be combined with an international symposium on plastics technology during the first Israel Plastics Week, due to be held at the Tel Aviv Sheraton Hotel February 8-11. The event is being organized by the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, under the auspices of the Jerusalem Economic Conference; its aim is to attract wider attention to the progress made by Israel's plastics industry and to provide an opportunity for commercial and technical contacts, so as to help Israeli manufacturers acquire export outlets and sophisticated know-how agreements. It is expected to be attended by a large number of buyers and potential investors from several countries. The local plastics industry currently comprises about 250 plants of different sizes, employing more than 4,000 workers altogether. Output amounted to IL280m. in 1970, and will have increased about 30 per cent in 1971. Exports of plastic products may have topped $2m. last year. However, planners consider these achievements only a beginning. The industry's export target has been set at $20m. for 1975, and its total output at about double the 1970 figure. Dr. M. Mandelbaum, director of the Food and Chemical Division at the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, told the press yesterday. He achieves that target, significant investments will be required, and the industry will have to find and absorb at least 1,000 additional skilled workers and technicians. Products put out by the local plastics factories range from jerry-

THE RED TAPE RUN-AROUND

A PERSONAL VIEWPOINT — by SHALOM COHEN

THE Prime Minister, on October 30, appealed to officials to rescue the citizen from draconic red-tape run-around. It was a rare event, coming from the very top, coming from the Government at all. Mrs. Meir addressed her appeal to a gathering of top administration executives, including virtually all the Ministers' directors-general. I was reminded of this when, shortly afterwards I emerged from darkest red-tape land, where the officials say they themselves have difficulty in wading through the welter of regulations and procedures. The experience involved the Transport Ministry, regrettably perhaps since this is one Government unit that says it is trying to simplify its procedures and at least recognizes there is a problem. Three months have passed and the net result so far is that the exasperation of the non-bureaucratic citizen emerging from the bureaucratic inferno now enjoys official sanction. I have just emerged from darkest red-tape land, where the officials say they themselves have difficulty in wading through the welter of regulations and procedures. The experience involved the Transport Ministry, regrettably perhaps since this is one Government unit that says it is trying to simplify its procedures and at least recognizes there is a problem.

The missing document Waiting in a queue at the vehicle licensing bureau meant a stop of about an hour and half before getting down to business. On finally reaching the official practically every other person learns that he is missing some document or other, and is told to come again — meaning another wait in queue. In my own case, at the end of a third visit, when everything seemed blessedly over, I was told I needed only to go to the post office and pay, and return "tomorrow" since the bureau, open in the morning, was about to close. As a veteran, I — like some others — demanded to "see the manager" — a very decent fellow, who allowed me to rush to the post office — downtown — and return to the bureau after midday closing hours. I was a successful sudsnik.

The priorities The Government recognizes immigration and the absorption of immigrants as one of the highest national priorities. But for many new citizens the meeting with the bureaucratic machine can be an "anti-absorption" experience. Initiated Israelis might find their way through the labyrinth, the newcomer often goes down in the fray. Red-tape, uncontrolled parking, is a natural for the universal Parkin's Law of mechanical growth. Ministers come, Ministers go, each with fresh vigour promulgates new and more regulations. When does one hear of any being cancelled? The accumulative output of formalities, forms, procedures is lost sight of. If the Government's own structure is at fault, that is the Government's problem. The problem of the bureaucracy and the citizen has never appeared on the Cabinet's official agenda, to the best of my knowledge. Far can't toys, from bulky containers to tiny components for electronic equipment. Part of the raw materials is also locally produced. Output of PVC amounted to $4,000 tons last year, and is expected to be increased shortly. Production of polystyrene is also to be started in the near future, with most of the planned capacity (16,000 tons a year) booked in advance. The high tariff on imported PVC, the major raw material of the plastics industry, was the reason for low profitability of Amib, an Amcor subsidiary; while Amgat, another subsidiary of that concern, which uses mainly polystyrene, has been making good profits, reports were told at the Amgat plant. In spite of the high protection, substantial imports of PVC are inevitable, he said, because local production falls far short of demand. PVC consumption topped 16,000 tons in 1970, while local output amounted to less than 10,000 tons. The situation is expected to improve when plants now at hand are completed, bringing PVC production to over 20,000 tons.

I.L.O. head due here next week Mr. Oloffe Sunka, Director-General of the International Labour Office, is due next week for a nine-day visit at the invitation of Labour Minister Yosef Almog. He will lecture at the Hebrew University Law Faculty and at the Social Sciences Faculty at Tel Aviv University.

Waiting in a queue at the vehicle licensing bureau meant a stop of about an hour and half before getting down to business. On finally reaching the official practically every other person learns that he is missing some document or other, and is told to come again — meaning another wait in queue. In my own case, at the end of a third visit, when everything seemed blessedly over, I was told I needed only to go to the post office and pay, and return "tomorrow" since the bureau, open in the morning, was about to close. As a veteran, I — like some others — demanded to "see the manager" — a very decent fellow, who allowed me to rush to the post office — downtown — and return to the bureau after midday closing hours. I was a successful sudsnik.

The formalities at this department, like in many others, are so complicated you need a legal adviser. Yet the walls of the bureau were virtually bare — there were no notices calling citizens what papers to bring for their respective business. The simple solution one would think would be to have a central information desk at the bureau to inform, advise, single, and direct citizens before having to wait needlessly in queue. At this department, it was the officials themselves, including the director, who begged me to write about this bureaucratic morass. For they too are victims of the system, so they told me. About three months ago, on September 20, an official Cabinet communiqué, in an item on the economy freeing of civil service manpower, included this statement: "Ministers dwelt on the need for raising productivity, reducing absenteeism, improving services to the citizen, and getting prompt res-waiting for years I know — who doesn't? — of cases in which people have been kept on a string for years by means of "changing information" from officials and shuffling between divided authority. The privileged few who are insulated from the bureaucratic steamroller should listen in to the hair-raising stories of red-tape run-around broadcast on the radio's admirable series, aptly titled "The matter is under review," where the authorities are confronted with desperate citizens. Interestingly, of all the numerous complaints we have heard broadcast, not one was deemed unjustified by the department concerned, government or municipal, and in fact, each complaint was remedied to the citizen's satisfaction as shown in the follow-up reports.

Ex-Rumanian rugby star makes debut in Israel By JACK LEON Jerusalem Post Sports Reporter TEL AVIV. — A former Rumanian international rugby union player, Robert Rosenberg, will make his Israel debut when he turns out tomorrow for Tel Aviv "City" against the combined Nahshon-Tzora XV. The match takes place at Kibbutz Tzora. Kick off at 2.30. Rosenberg, 35, a construction engineer with Soteli Bonah, played for Rumania several times in the late 1960s, immediately prior to immigrating to Israel two years ago. The burly lock-forward and expert kicker played 16 years of National League rugby with Jassy Politehnica, one of Rumania's top teams. For the last four of these he was also Jassy's captain, the only Jew ever to have led a Rumanian rugby club. (After France, Rumania is the strongest rugby-playing country on the European continent).

New campaign for W.I.

SOCIETIES of Weizmann Institute supporters are being formed throughout the U.S. in a new campaign which seeks help from a wider public for the Institute, which usually appeals to America's millionaire class for help. The campaign is led by a Milwaukee businessman, Bill Feldstein, above, who is now in Israel for his fifth visit. "We'll have about a dozen societies in operation this year and, I hope, another dozen next year," he says. Membership dues will be $1,000 a year, and each society is expected to take on an annual project in the $100,000 to $500,000 range — apart from individual gifts. Bill Feldstein's business concerns include two large textile firms, and he is also chairman of the Central States Region for Israel Bonds.

'Car immigrant' freed on bond

ASEKELEON. — Magistrate GShad GShadi yesterday ordered the release of Claude Ben-Haim, an immigrant from France, on IL30,000 bond. Ben-Haim was arrested by customs police 10 days ago and accused of using his new immigrant's rights to import nine cars duty free, as well as various electrical appliances. From court, Ben-Haim was returned to the detention centre at Ashdod police headquarters, pending his posting of the bond.

NEW IMMIGRANTS! HOW CAN YOU AND YOUR MONEY BE SABRAS FROM YOUR FIRST DAY IN ISRAEL?

YOU CAN'T DO IT (UNLESS YOU HAVE RUHAMA KRAUSS)

Why do you have to be a sabra from your first day in Israel? Do you know where to buy a flat? Do you know enough Hebrew to understand your contract? Do you know what job opportunities are available in Israel? Do you know what to take and what you must give? Do you know what kind of car is best for Israeli conditions? Do you know where to buy Spanish furniture? Do you know a talented interior designer? Do you know the best way to invest your money? These are some of the problems you're sure to run into, and have no answer for. But Ruhama has! When you have Ruhama Krauss, you and your money will be sabras and life things from your first day in Israel! She knows what's good for you and what's bad for you; and how to solve your specific problems in the best, shortest and cheapest way for you. Ruhama will advise you, fight your battles, and take care of your interests everywhere; she will represent you. She is a sabra who understands sabras — and also sees the problem from your point of view. She'll run around, check things out and investigate until she comes up with the solution that is ideal for you. Ruhama turns your money into a sabra, but keeps it at its real value. When you have Ruhama Krauss, it's like being a Roman in Rome. When a sabra talks to a sabra, your money is worth more! You'll pay more and won't get the best because you're a new immigrant. When Ruhama buys something for you, you'll pay less and get more, because Ruhama knows where to buy, how to buy, how much to buy and what to buy. Ruhama is a sabra who knows how to talk to sabras (while you don't). Is Ruhama doing this just for your good looks? Ruhama thinks that just because you're a new immigrant you should not have to suffer till you've reached your goal. Ruhama does not represent any government office; all she does for you is on her own initiative — so you can split this into 50% patriotic Zionism and 50% business (and what's bad about that?) Don't delay — Call Ruhama! You've got nothing to lose, you will be able to meet Ruhama over a cup of coffee; she'll listen to your problem, suggest a solution, without any obligation, and if nothing comes of it, at least you have met a cute sabra. For your convenience, call for an appointment at the time and place most convenient for you.
